All-American Girl

Dear Editor,

I loved the article on Torrie Wilson in the July issue of SmackDown! Magazine ("Torrie's Story"). It was interesting to hear about her career. And she is the hottest Diva on SmackDown! I also loved the story on Eddie Guerrero ("Why, Eddie, Why?" by Jeremy Brown). I think Eddie is right. I like what he's been doing these past couple of months. It reminds me of the old Eddie Guerrero I used to see.

Sunny Days Ahead for London

Dear Editor,

Props to Jeremy Brown for the article on Paul London in the June issue ("London's Burning"). There is no doubt in my mind that London is one of the most talented Superstars on SmackDown! I've been amazed with every match I've seen him in. London truly rocks. I'd love to see more of him in SmackDown! Magazine soon, hopefully a cover story, interview or poster. Thanks again for the article!

"Chain Gang" Follows Cena Anywhere He Goes

Dear Editor,

I would like to thank you for putting John Cena on the cover of the June issue of SmackDown! Magazine. Even though John Cena was drafted over to Raw, I still am glad that he was on the cover. When I saw that issue, I instantly grabbed it and bought it. I really loved the stories on him. I really think that even though he hasn't been in WWE as long as others have, he deserves this fame more than a lot of other WWE Superstars. He has had the U.S. Championship twice and currently has the WWE Championship. He has an incredible amount of "Chain Gang" members, including me. He has definitely taken the wrestling world by storm. I am very glad that you recognized all his talents (wrestling, rapping, acting, etc.) and I am glad that he is here to stay!

> Ashley Meyer Via E-Mail

McCool Gaining New Fans

Dear Editor,

I enjoyed Michelle McCool's article and pictorial in your June issue ("The Pride of Palatka"). Out of all the new Divas, Michelle is my favorite by far. She's beautiful, athletic, and has proven that she is able to stand up to veteran Divas such as Dawn Marie. And at the risk of sounding completely cheesy, her name may be McCool, but she is totally McHot!

Shane Ramey Via E-Mail

SummerSlam: The Heat is Back

It all started 17 years ago—appropriately enough, at the mecca of sports-entertainment, Madison Square Garden. WWE was engulfed in the red-hot rivalry between the Mega-Powers, the duo of WWE Champion "Macho Man" Randy Savage & former champion Hulk Hogan, and the Mega-Bucks, the duo of "Million-Dollar Man" Ted DiBiase & "The Eighth Wonder of the World," Andre the Giant.

It was the summer of 1988, and these four Superstars were locked in a bitter feud. To allow their greatest battle to be seen by the largest audience possible, WWE instituted a new pay-perview spectacular, its third to date. The new event would be called SummerSlam. WWE would never be the same.

In its early years, SummerSlam carried with it the slogan, "Feel the Heat!" Never has there been a better fitting catchphrase, as SummerSlam played host to some of the wildest, most unpredictable, intense wars ever waged in a WWE ring. It was at SummerSlam that the Hulkster finally went head-to-head with his movie nemesis, Zeus; that Undertaker fought to expose the fraud of Ted DiBiase's imposter Undertaker; that Stone Cold Steve Austin and 'Taker met at the end of the "Highway to Hell"; that The Rock put his title on the line against a brash rookie, Brock Lesnar; that Kane first defeated Matt Hardy to win the reluctant hand of Lita.

There's a reason that many fans consider SummerSlam to be WWE's second-biggest annual pay-per-view event, right behind WrestleMania. Survivor Series built its legend originally on tag-team elimination matches. Royal Rumble is headlined by its own unique 30-man match of the same name. But, just like WrestleMania, each and every year SummerSlam has brought you pure competition. It's a classic formula that's yielded some undeniably incredible results.

Washington, D.C. will play host to the 18th annual edition of SummerSlam, an event that is sure to live up to the proud tradition of unparalleled excitement and non-stop action. Audiences the world over will "feel the heat" once again as the Superstars of both Raw and SmackDown! take to the ring to settle their grievances the WWE way.

And just as the Hulkster & Macho Man made history all those years ago, so too will the Superstars of today write their names in the annals of SummerSlam history. They will focus all their energy on that one blockbuster event to make sure that what they do on that day will live on always in the minds of all who see it.

I leave you with the words of the great Mohandas Gandhi:

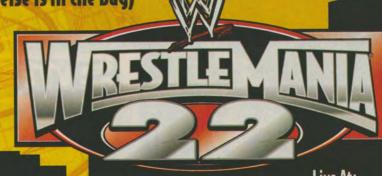

"I have learned through bitter experience the one supreme lesson to conserve my anger, and as heat conserved is transmitted into energy, even so our anger controlled can be transmitted into a power that can move the world."

We look forward to having you join us at the most exciting and spectacular WrestleMania weekend of all time!

Fridays is a winning proposition.

Friday nights in WWE are definitely not ordinary. Fans will no doubt remember The Main Event, a series of hourlong prime-time specials that aired on Fridays. And, as anyone who saw those shows remembers, anything could, and often did, happen.

All the action, mayhem and excitement you've come to expect from your Thursday nights are ready to explode on Fridays. World Heavyweight Champion Batista (left), John "Bradshaw" Layfield (above) and the ominous Undertaker (right) are among the elite WWE Superstars who will now have a new home.

Now you've got a whole new reason to be working for the weekend. So cancel any plans you may have. Because from now on, Friday nights belong to SmackDown!

oves to Fridays on UPN

COOD FRIDAY

By coming to Fridays, SmackDown! joins a long list of successful shows that have made their homes on the first night of the weekend. Here's a look at a few other notable Friday hits.

Rawhide – Clint Eastwood's cowboy adventure debuted in January 1959 on Fridays, and it went on to run for five seasons.

The Flintstones – Until The Simpsons, this B.C.-era answer to The Honeymooners was the longest running prime-time animated series in TV history.

The Brady Bunch – America's favorite family made their home on Fridays during their entire TV run from 1969 to 1973.

The Dukes of Hazzard – The Duke boys tore it up for seven seasons, barreling along the back roads of Hazzard County every Friday night.

Miami Vice – This sun-soaked cop drama made teal T-shirts and unshaven faces into the hip styles of the time. It also helped make Don Johnson "Mr. Friday Night."

Knight Rider – Lots of guys had cool cars in the '80s, but it's safe to say that David Hasselhoff had the coolest. Hasselhoff and his trusty car, KITT, became staples of NBC's Friday lineup and ruled in the ratings for four seasons.

Dallas – Although it began its run on a Sunday, it was on Friday nights that this prime-time soap really took off. It became the most popular series on network television, and the resolution of the "Who shot J.R.?" cliffhanger remains one of the mostwatched events in TV history.

The X-Files – At the time of its debut, there were very few dramas to keep older audiences home on Friday nights. The paranormal adventures of FBI agents Fox Mulder and Dana Scully changed all of that, making Fridays the night to stay home.

"I have plenty of admirers in high places who've told me what these weasel journalists utter behind our backs," Melina says. "I heard that some even started a pool over whether we'd be on a losing streak by the time the August issue of SmackDown! hit the newsstands. Sorry to disappoint you guys, but there's a new issue of SmackDown! on sale—and guess who's on the cover?"

To a degree, Melina's self-righteousness is reasonable. After all, many observers initially tagged MNM as the team more famous for its look than anything else. Even before their first match on SmackDown!, MNM was trailed by photographers more intrigued by the threesome's unique appearance than its achievements.

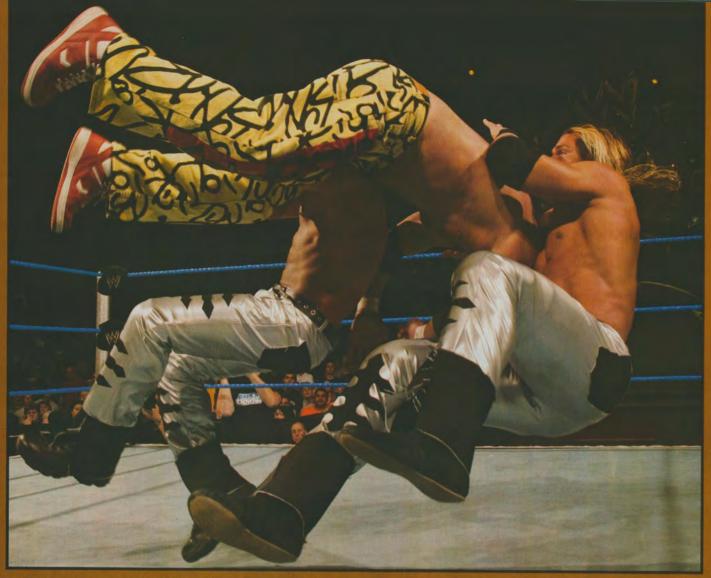

When Nitro & Mercury captured the WWE Tag Team Championship in their very first match, the popular consensus was that the gold would slip through their fingers

That was made abundantly clear when MNM tangled with Heidenreich and his new "friend," Road Warrior Animal. The cocky young tag team held their ground ing to be intimidated by his legendary

For Melina, that aggressive spirit combat. Repelled by the notion that her fellow WWE Divas are paragons of

Yet, those who focus on Melina fall

Because of their early success, Nitro & Mercury's potential is sometimes compared with the records of other WWE newcomers who swiftly rocketed to the top of their profession. But such comparisons mean little to them

"We hear people comparing us to guys from back in the day like Kerry Von Erich, because he burst on the scene and won the Intercontinental title right away," Mercury says. "But those people just don't get it. Von Erich already established himself years before when he beat Ric Flair for the NWA title. Unlike the 'Texas Tornado,' we walked into WWE cold. We came out of nowhere and shocked all the so-called experts."

"I mean, sure, there were Superstars like Kurt Angle and Brock Lesnar who came here and won titles right off the bat, but even those guys didn't do what we did," Nitro says. "Angle was an Olympic gold medalist; Lesnar was an NCAA Champion. WWE fans had no idea who we were that first night, when we debuted in Madison Square Garden. But we changed all that by winning the WWE Tag Team titles that same night. Now, everyone knows who we are."

Perhaps it's more appropriate to measure MNM next to Carlito, who won the U.S. Championship in his first SmackDown! match, or Christian, who earned the Light Heavyweight title in his WWE debut. Both came out of nowhere and very quickly grabbed the spotlight. And in both their cases, they have remained among WWE's elite ever since.

"To all those people who say we got lucky, I have news for you," Nitro says. "We were lucky the day we were born. Not everyone is blessed with the attributes we were given. And that's too bad. But nobody says that life is fair. It's not really our fault if we're perfect in an imperfect world."

It's an attitude MNM carries on the red carpet and, as the results have shown, into the ring as well.

ach summer in WWE, it comes down to one explosive event. One night in which scores are settled and history is made. Since 1988, that event has been SummerSlam.

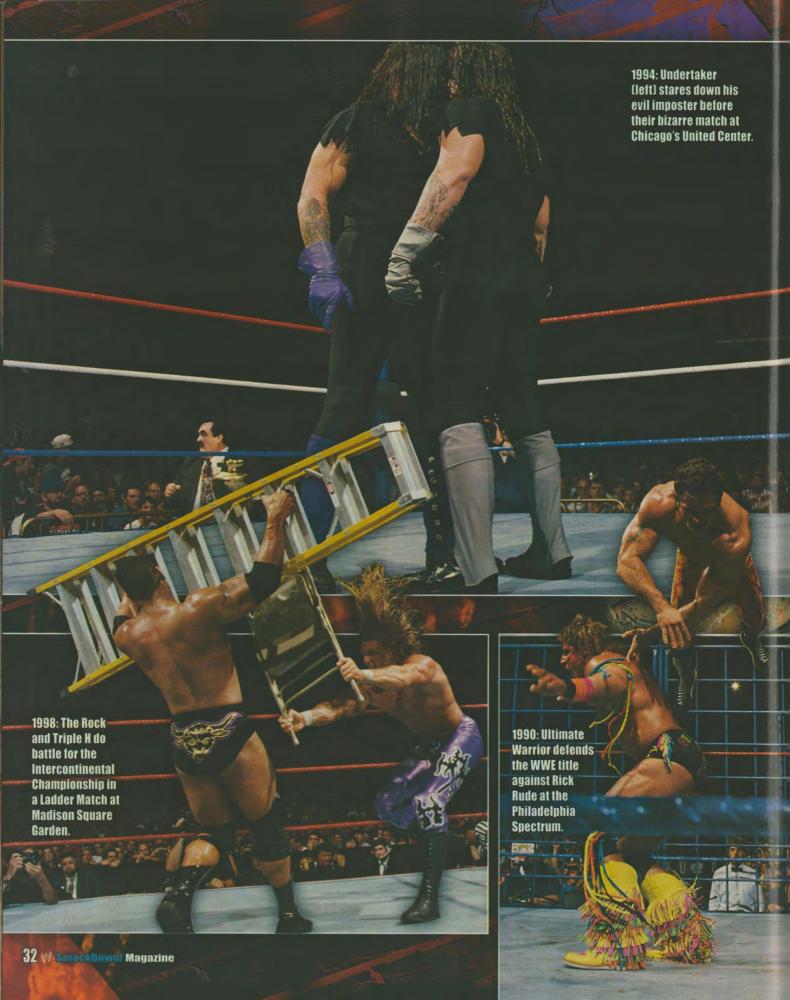

And in the years since WWE has been transformed into two distinct brands, SummerSlam has taken on a greater significance than ever before. There are only four nights each year in which the Superstars of Raw and SmackDown! compete at the same event. SummerSlam is one of those nights.

So many of WWE's most memorable moments have taken place at SummerSlam. Perhaps that is why many fans refer to as "the WrestleMania of summer." Fans wait the entire season each year to witness the excitement that SummerSlam offers.

It's the kind of excitement that can only be done proper justice through pictures—which is why we have assembled some of the greatest SummerSlam photos from over the years. These pictures represent the heart and soul of SummerSlam, the efforts of some of the finest athletes to ever set foot in a ring.

So, as we all wait with baited breath for the latest, and perhaps greatest, installment of this annual WWE extravaganza, let's take some time to look back on some of the moments that remind us exactly why SummerSlam is something worth waiting for.

Bruno Sammartino The Life & Times of monorable Legend Every month since the early 1960s, way to rally back for the victory. April 26, 1976 seemed different.

fans at Madison Square Garden had been faithfully frequenting the "World's Most Famous Arena" to cheer Bruno Sammartino to victory. And although the Italian strongman had been in his share of sticky situations, he'd always found a

But for some reason, the night of

As his challenger that evening, 322pound Texan, Stan "The Lariat" Hansen scooped Sammartino up and slammed him to the mat, the fans heard a loud snap. That sound was Bruno's neck breaking.

Fueled by adrenaline, Sammartino continued to wrestle for a few more minutes before the referee—concerned for Bruno's health-stopped the match. As the decision was rendered, Bruno collapsed from the pain and was rushed away from the Garden in an ambulance.

After an injury of this magnitude, most men would have considered hanging up the boots and seeking a new occupation. In fact, that's exactly what Bruno's doctors advised him to do. But Sammartino would not heed their advice.

Less than two months after having his neck broken, he returned to action at Shea Stadium. That night, Bruno gave Hansen such a severe beating that the Texan ran from the ring and lost the contest via countout. Following several tag team matches against Hansen, Sammartino finally got "The Lariat" one-on-one in a Steel Cage Match at MSG, where he evened the score and showed the world that he was back.

For Sammartino, struggles such as these were par for the course. Hoping to make enough money to move his family to the U.S. and give them a better life, Bruno's father left their native Pizzoferrato, Abruzzi, Italy for the United States shortly after Bruno was born on October 6, 1935. World War II started in 1939, and all passages between Italy and America were soon closed.

Despite having a strong mother to raise him, Bruno faced severe poverty and even hostility from invading German troops before he finally made it to the U.S. at age 14. It wasn't long after he arrived that Bruno, who now resided in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, developed an interest in powerlifting. Within a few years, he went from an 85-pound kid to 250-pound man.

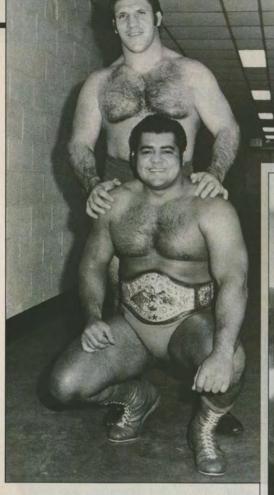

In 1959, Sammartino began his wrestling career, and just four years later, he was on top. On May 17, 1963, he defeated the first WWE Champion, "Nature Boy" Buddy Rogers, with a bear hug in just 48 seconds. He'd go on to hold the prestigious title for nearly eight years—the longest reign in history.

For wrestling fans in the Northeast, Sammartino became more than just a champion. He was a role model for children, a hero for all people of European descent, and a living, breathing American success story. During the course of his historic title reign, Bruno managed to garner more fan support than any Italian sports icon since New York Yankee Joe DiMaggio. When he stepped in the ring against an opponent, they not only became his enemy, they became the enemy of every person inside the arena.

Two of Sammartino's most legendary foes were "Classy" Freddie Blassie and "The Spaniard" Crusher Verdu. During June 1964, in front of more than 12,000 fans inside Roosevelt Stadium in Jersey City, New Jersey, Blassie picked up a rare victory over Sammartino by countout. The next month they met again, this time in front of a sellout crowd at MSG, and again, Blassie was victorious, this time by DQ. But the Garden crowd finally got their revenge in early August, when Bruno pinned the "Hollywood Fashion Plate."

(Below) Sammartino pauses his workout to pose in front of a mirror. defeated Stan Stasiak and began another historic three-and-a-half year reign as WWE Champion. It was during this time that Bruno tangled with Hansen, Killer Kowalski, Ken Patera and "Superstar" Billy Graham.

In April '77, Graham managed to Another rare Sammartino loss was against Verdu, who picked up a victory over Bruno at MSG in June 1970, when the referee stopped the contest due to a cut over Bruno's eye, but Sammartino retained the title. Despite the fact that WWE was temporarily off weekly television at the time, both this match and the rematch in July attracted the Garden's two biggest crowds in over a decade.

During his years on top, Sammartino clashed with many of the industry's other top stars, including Gorilla Monsoon, Waldo Von Erich and Haystacks Calhoun. Astonishingly, during a match against the 601-pound Calhoun, Bruno actually slammed the gargantuan—a feat that had never before been accomplished.

On January 18, 1971, the unthinkable happened. During a match against "The Russian Bear" Ivan Koloff, Sammartino was struck with a flying knee off of the top rope, and was pinned. Just like that, his seven-and-a-half-year championship run was over, but not for long.

Less than two years later, Bruno wrest the title away from Sammartino in Baltimore, Maryland. Throughout that summer, Bruno feverishly attempted to regain the crown, but he was unable to pin the flamboyant Graham's shoulders to the mat. And although he finally picked up a victory over Graham in front of a sellout crowd at The Spectrum in Philadelphia after the referee stopped the contest due to blood, Bruno was never able to regain the title.

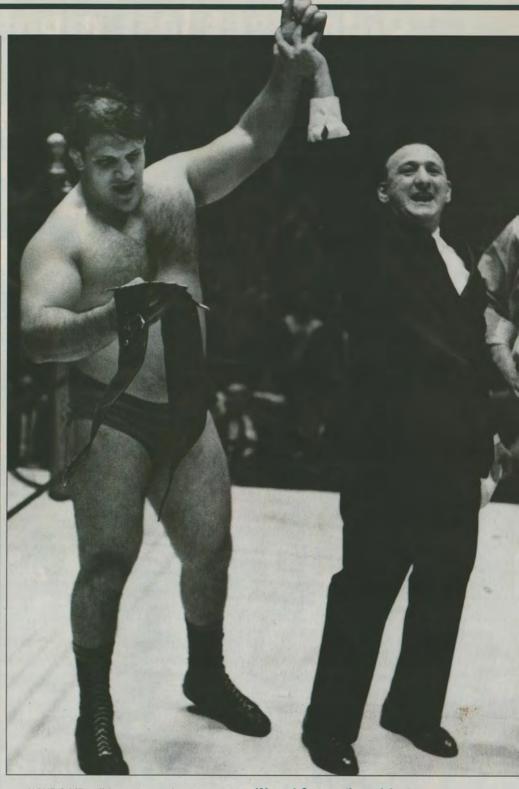

Over the next few years, Bruno began to mentor Larry Zbyszko as his protégé. At first, it seemed as though Sammartino was preparing the young athlete to be his eventual successor. Instead of biding his time and learning all that he could, however, Zbyszko viciously turned on Bruno in a bloody televised match.

On August 9, 1980, at an event billed as the Showdown at Shea, Bruno defeated Zbyszko in a legendary Steel Cage Match, which proved once and for all that experience can overcome youth.

Even as he approached his 50th birth-day, Sammartino continued to wrestle intermittently and took a position as a broadcaster for WWE. Throughout the early '80s, Bruno clashed with future Hall of Famers "Rowdy" Roddy Piper, "Mr. Wonderful" Paul Orndorff and "Cowboy" Bob Orton. In one of his final WWE appearances, Bruno competed in the 20-man invitational Battle Royal at WrestleMania 2, where he tossed out former WWE Champion Iron Sheik before being eliminated by Big John Studd.

In 1987, Bruno, feeling that he'd accomplished everything there is to accomplish in sports-entertainment, officially retired from the ring. But nearly two decades later, people still reminisce about him and his amazing accomplishments.

Altogether, Sammartino held the WWE Championship for nearly 11 years. He headlined Madison Square Garden 211 times, 187 of which were sellout crowds—a record that will likely never be approached. Aside from his amazing accolades, Sammartino is credited as the man who helped put WWE on the map during its territorial days as the World Wide Wrestling Federation, and paved the way for the Superstars of the '80s, '90s and beyond.

WWE 24/7 will be airing a classic special program on Bruno Sammartino during the month of August. Don't have WWE 24/7? It's only available on digital cable, so call your local cable operator and demand WWE 24/7, or log on to 24-7.wwe.com for more details.

(Above ) Sammartino celebrates his first WWE Championship victory after defeating "Nature Boy" Buddy Rogers in just 48 seconds in May 1963. He'd hold the title until January 1971.

From the Mind of HEII

[Editor's Note: We apologize for the absence of Heidenreich's column from last month's issue. Unfortunately, the "disasterpiece" he submitted was considered too extreme for general consumption. This month, Heidenreich seems to have gotten his creative process under control again (under control for Heidenreich, that is), and so we are able to present his latest "disasterpiece."]

Wrestling for Friends

ver since Booker T gave me that chair shot a few months back, I have seen things in a new light. It is almost like I have moved from the dark side to the light side. Instead of viewing the glass as half-empty, I now view it as half-full.

Someone once told Heidenreich that perception is everything. I think, therefore I am—Heidenreich thinks he is good, therefore he is good. It is hard to believe that getting hit with a chair could do so much good for someone.

Generally, people view getting hit with a chair as a bad thing. I perceive it as good. Therefore, it is good for me!

A chair shot took the most vicious competitor on SmackDown! and made him likeable—hell, I may be lovable!

I don't know about that, Heidenreich. Don't push your luck. You still are a few cards short of a full deck.

Don't tell me who or what I am! Back to the story, Heidenreich! OK, OK, the magic chair shot, right!

I had to thank Booker T, because he saved my life. I was so full of anger and rage. I was headed down a dead-end road, going nowhere fast. I was so out of control, I needed to be institutionalized. It's hard to believe all the innocent victims I attacked for no rhyme or reason. That sure is a funny word, rhyme...

After all these years of running off the rails on a crazy train, my life is finally starting to come together. People actually allow their kids within 50 feet of me. I can honestly say I have changed for the better. I feel good about myself. Heidenreich is ready to accept his role as a positive influence in the world.

It seems like only yesterday that I was escorted to the ring in a strait jacket. What has happened Heidenreich is almost like a miracle. I am a writer, not a fighter.

What the devil are you talking about, Heidenreich? You have gone completely mad! Heidenreich loves to fight!

> No, he doesn't! Yes, he does! Shut up!

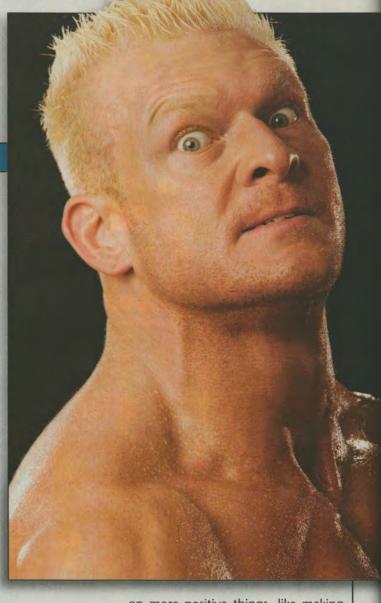

Wow, it's hard dealing with me. Where was I before I interrupted myself? Oh yes, I was talking about fighting. I was fighting a losing battle within myself, against the demons that have haunted me for a long time.

Those demons have been put to rest. Buried. I am a free man. I had been a slave to my own anger and rage. Now Heidenreich can focus his energy on more positive things, like making friends all over the world and gaining a championship for Heidenreich and all his friends.

Without my friends, I would not be where I am today. I now can write poems about my gains, instead of all my pain. It seems like it has taken a lifetime, but I think the world is finally starting to understand Heidenreich. All Heidenreich ever wanted was to be accepted for who he was and what he stood for.

I want to thank everyone for the second chance to show I'm not a bad person. I was just misunderstood.
